

To Whom it May Concern,

I am writing on behalf of Brian Gordon with regard to the effectiveness of his work with our school in building a greater understanding of children on the Autism Spectrum and other forms of social/emotional deficit.

His type of training is an extremely effective approach to promote understanding and support the needs of students with ASD. He possesses an ability to impart information in a way that is accessible to everyone. His method is engaging and empowering to my staff. His chief aim, in my opinion, is to help everyone to see that this is an exciting challenge rather than a mystifying task.

He continues to work with our school both in the classroom and during team meetings to process together successful approaches to improving life in the classroom for our students who present with social challenges.

If you have not attended one of his trainings then I highly recommend doing so. His unique approach to understanding and engaging children through the use of cognitive tools and dramatic (improvisational) methods is nothing short of innovative and, again, accessible.

I can be reached by email or telephone if you require any further explanation to support Brian Gordon's candidacy in working to improve the lives and abilities of children with ASD and other forms of social/emotional challenges.

Sincerely,

Alan Feldman, Director
